

PROCTER & GAMBLE Co
Form DEFA14A
September 05, 2017

UNITED STATES
SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION
Washington, D.C. 20549

SCHEDULE 14A
Proxy Statement Pursuant to Section 14(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934

Filed by the Registrant

Filed by a party other than the Registrant

Check the appropriate box:

Preliminary Proxy Statement

Confidential, for Use of the Commission Only (as permitted by Rule 14a-6(e)(2))

Definitive Proxy Statement

Definitive Additional Materials

Soliciting Material under Rule 14a-12

The Procter & Gamble Company

(Name of Registrant as Specified In Its Charter)

(Name of Person(s) Filing Proxy Statement, if other than the Registrant)

Payment of Filing Fee (Check the appropriate box):

No fee required.

Fee computed on table below per Exchange Act Rules 14a-6(i)(1) and 0-11.

- (1) Title of each class of securities to which transaction applies:

- (2) Aggregate number of securities to which transaction applies:

- (3) Per unit price or other underlying value of transaction computed pursuant to Exchange Act Rule 0-11 (set forth the amount on which the filing fee is calculated and state how it was determined):

- (4) Proposed maximum aggregate value of transaction:

- (5) Total fee paid:

Fee paid previously with preliminary materials.

Check box if any part of the fee is offset as provided by Exchange Act Rule 0-11(a)(2) and identify the filing for which the offsetting fee was paid previously. Identify the previous filing by registration statement number, or the Form or Schedule and the date of its filing.

- (1) Amount Previously Paid:

- (2) Form, Schedule or Registration Statement No.:

- (3) Filing Party:

(4) Date Filed:

To the men and women of Procter & Gamble,

I am writing to you to share my personal views on the proxy battle over the composition of our Board. I want you to know why I am strongly supporting the Company's position as the right thing to do for the future of our Company and everyone who depends on it, including us.

Although retired for 15 years, there is hardly a day that goes by that I don't think about P&G and hardly a week during which I don't meet with someone or a group from P&G.

In part, because I am physically close to P&G (my office is just across the street from the Cincinnati G.O.), I have remained close to many P&G people and organizations. In a way, I don't feel I ever left P&G. While anything but an insider, I think I have maintained a good handle on how the business is trending, the quality of our leadership and the spirit of the place.

I like what I am seeing and feeling.

First and most importantly, we have the right CEO. Some of you, I am sure, know and have worked with David Taylor. He fits the description I have applied to several P&G CEOs whom I have known: He is the right leader for the times. Focused, transparent, courageous, committed to our Purpose and Values and in touch with reality, his leadership is being acclaimed by the troops and he is respected by outside parties.

I have great confidence in David's leadership. The night after first seeing David share his vision for the Company, I wrote in my journal: I will be going home tonight to sleep easily confident in the future of our Company.

Second, thanks to your unrelenting efforts, recent business results show we are on the way back. Top- and bottom-line performance is improving; we're seeing stronger market share growth and continued strong cash flow. P&G's stock price is beginning to reflect this improvement.

As you know well, the past several years have been challenging on many fronts: The energy involved in rationalizing our brand portfolio, the reduction in our cost structure and dealing with the impact of a once-in-a-lifetime strengthening dollar have represented strong headwinds.

During the half-century I've been part of P&G, I've experienced many challenging times in the 70s, early 80s and late 90s. I've said only half-jokingly, I've not only seen this movie, I've been in it.

If there is one benefit which age confers, it is to know that, when we have hit challenges like these, we've buckled down, figured out what needs to be done and done it. That is what I see happening now.

David is pursuing a solid go-forward plan, his senior leadership team is aligned, and from all I can see, you are implementing it with passion and effectiveness. I am not a bit surprised. P&G people would have it no other way. We simply don't quit. We intend to win.

Finally, make no mistake, there is a proverbial elephant on the table regarding this proxy fight with Trian.

Some have asked: What difference could one person make on a big board? It is an understandable question.

Let me tell you from my Board experience, one director can make a big difference in promoting or thwarting the creation of the most productive dynamics on the Board itself and its interaction with management.

I've experienced the negative side of this painfully more than once.

I don't know Mr. Peltz. I can't predict with certainty how he would act on the P&G Board. But of this I do feel sure, and it worries me enormously—my experience on five for-profit boards and what I have read (including the extract below from a column from a leading New York Times economics reporter) convinces me that Peltz's entry on the Board risks putting a serious brake on our momentum, which could negatively impact our Company's growth for years to come.

I think most of you would agree. We have had more than enough discontinuities in the last 5-10 years. We don't need someone to come in and try to figure out yet another new plan. The discussions with Peltz have failed to reveal new ideas. You have a plan. Now is the time to execute.

We need undistracted focus on doing what we have always needed to do and that is grow the business and win vs. competition through superior product offerings and messaging. That is what I see happening.

Let me cut to the chase.

We have the right CEO.

He has a strong go-forward plan and a strong leadership team focused on the execution of that plan.

The people of the Company have renewed confidence in their leadership and the will to win.

The results are starting to come.

Let's not have an activist investor without a record of driving sustained growth risk upsetting this and the future of our great Company. I hope you'll trust me: that risk is very large.

This election is about more than a Board seat. It is about the future of the Company we love.

I walked in the door at 6th & Sycamore streets in Cincinnati 54 years ago almost to the day. Our sales then were little more than $1 billion. Our stock (on an adjusted basis) was just under $1.00 per share. Its growth since then has averaged 8.6% per year and dividends have been on top of that. Sure, there have been dry spells. I don't think we had one stock option in the money through most of the 70s. But we did not lose confidence. And here we are celebrating our 180th anniversary.

I know what matters is what happens tomorrow and the next day and the day after that, but I hope and ask that you put your trust in David Taylor and in yourselves, the women and men of our Company, and not take the risk of throwing a wrench into the hard-earned momentum now underway.

Thank you for taking the time to consider my views on this vital issue. Please join me: Vote all your blue proxy cards.

Thank you for all you are doing for the Company. As always, you are the key to our growth and success. You are why I am certain of that success.

With best personal wishes,

John E. Pepper

Former CEO and Chairman of the Board, P&G

Quote from article in New York Times by Andrew Ross Sorkin, July 17, 2017

(permission to reference and quote was neither sought nor obtained):

Part of Mr. Peltz's charm is that, unlike some other activists, he shuns using huge leverage, and he does not demand big buybacks and dividends. Instead, he often presses companies to increase revenues and encourages them to spend money on marketing. All of which sounds nice and non-threatening. He's so charming that a proxy contest at P&G would be only the third time he has started such a battle—in other instances, he settled and got a seat or seats on the board before going public with his complaints. His presentations even include testimonials from chief executives of companies he had invested in, lauding him as an exemplar shareholder.

But it is worth noting that those chief executives are from the companies he has targeted that have subsequently found success. There are no testimonials from Mr. Immelt, or Ellen Kullman, the retired former chief executive of DuPont, or from any executives at Chemtura, a chemical company that went bankrupt after allowing Mr. Peltz's team on its board.

None of this is to say that Mr. Peltz isn't a good investor, or that, in certain circumstances, obstinate companies don't need change.

And Mr. Peltz is very good at that. His returns have nearly doubled the S&P 500 since 2005.

But there's a rub: Once he cashes out, many of the companies he invested in lag in value, raising a meaningful question for shareholders about whether the changes he makes improve the company over the long term.

For example, two years after he cashed out of G.N.C., the vitamin and nutrition company, the stock lagged the S&P 500 by 42 percent. Similarly, Sotheby's stock lagged the S&P 500 by 41 percent two years after he exited the investment.

Important Additional Information and Where to Find It

The Company has filed a definitive proxy statement on Schedule 14A and form of associated BLUE proxy card with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in connection with the solicitation of proxies for its 2017 Annual Meeting of Shareholders (the Definitive Proxy Statement). The Company, its directors and certain of its executive officers will be participants in the solicitation of proxies from shareholders in respect of the 2017 Annual Meeting. Information regarding the names of the Company's directors and executive officers and their respective interests in the Company by security holdings or otherwise is set forth in the Definitive Proxy Statement. Details concerning the nominees of the Company's Board of Directors for election at the 2017 Annual Meeting are included in the Definitive Proxy Statement. BEFORE MAKING ANY VOTING DECISION, INVESTORS AND SHAREHOLDERS OF THE COMPANY ARE URGED TO READ ALL RELEVANT DOCUMENTS FILED WITH OR FURNISHED TO THE SEC, INCLUDING THE COMPANY'S DEFINITIVE PROXY STATEMENT AND ANY SUPPLEMENTS THERETO AND ACCOMPANYING BLUE PROXY CARD, BECAUSE THEY WILL CONTAIN IMPORTANT INFORMATION. Shareholders may obtain a free copy of the Definitive Proxy Statement and other relevant documents that the Company files with the SEC from the SEC's website at www.sec.gov or the Company's website at <http://www.pginvestor.com> as soon as reasonably practicable after such materials are electronically filed with, or furnished to, the SEC.