ITEM 5. OTHER EVENTS.

In a Memorandum Opinion and Order adopted April 9, 2002, and released on April 10, 2002 (the Order), the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) granted approval of the applications of National Broadcasting Company, Inc. (NBC), for consent to the transfer to NBC of control of the television stations owned by subsidiaries of Telemundo Communications Group, Inc. (Telemundo). Paxson Communications Corporation (the Company) had filed with the FCC a Petition to Deny approval of these applications and a request for a Declaratory Ruling as to whether conduct by NBC, including NBC's influence and apparent control over certain members of the Company's board directors selected by NBC (all of whom have since resigned from the board), had caused NBC to have an attributable interest in the Company in violation of FCC rules. In the Order, the FCC also denied the Company's Petition to Deny and granted in part and denied in part the Company's request for a Declaratory Ruling. Although the FCC found that the placement of NBC employees on the Company's board and the subsequent actions of those persons in their capacity as directors of the Company resulted in NBC having an attributable interest in the Company in violation of the FCC's multiple ownership rules, the FCC concluded that admonishment is the appropriate remedy and that further inquiry is not necessary. The FCC further indicated that should NBC choose to exercise its rights to nominate new members of the Company's board of directors, the FCC would require that such persons not be NBC employees or agents but persons who would reasonably be expected to act independently in all future Company matters.
