28 Non-GAAP Measures

Non-GAAP Financial Measures

To better understand the trends in our business and the impact of this transaction post-acquisition, we believe it will be necessary adjust diluted earnings per share to exclude the effects of the following items: (1) the amortization of purchased intangible asset asset impairment charges; and (3) acquisition related costs. Management believes that excluding the effects of these items will better understand and analyze the impact of this transaction as well as results for a particular period as compared to prior period expects to use this non-GAAP financial measure in its own evaluation of Xerox's performance, particularly when comparing periods.

To better understand the trends in our business, we believe that it is helpful to adjust cash flows from operations to exclude amounts for capital expenditures including internal use software and certain additions to intangible believes this measure provides investors an additional perspective on cash flows from operations in excess of amounts required Free Cash Flow provides a measure of our ability to fund acquisitions, repay debt, pay dividends and repurchase shares. Addit it is helpful to adjust Free Cash Flow to exclude the net payments made for the securities-related litigation matter. Management excluding the effects of these payments helps investors better understand and analyze the current periods results given the national payments and their relation to prior period events. A reconciliation of these non-GAAP financial measures and the most direct calculated and presented in accordance with GAAP are set forth on slides 30, 31 and 32.

To better understand the trends in Xerox s business, we believe that it is helpful to adjust Operating Margins to exclude restructuring and asset impairment charges, other expenses and a 2008 equipment write off. For ACS, we excluded the recognized on the sale of a business and the 2007 software impairment charge. Management believes that excluding the effects investors better understand and analyze the results and provides a better measure of comparability given the discrete nature of respective periods. A reconciliation of these non-GAAP financial measures and the most directly comparable measures calculated accordance with GAAP are set forth on slides 33 and 34.

To better understand the trends in the ACS business, we believe that it is helpful to adjust revenues to exclude amounts related to businesses that were subsequently divested. Management believes that these divested businesses are not strongoing operations and excluding these revenues will enable investors to better analyze results for a particular period and the protection of these non-GAAP financial measures and the most directly comparable measures call in accordance with GAAP are set forth on slide 35.

Management believes that these non-GAAP financial measures provide an additional means of analyzing the current periods corresponding prior periods results. However, these non-GAAP financial measures should be viewed in addition to, and not a Xerox s reported results prepared in accordance with GAAP.
